The Honorable William E. Colby Central Intelligence Agency Washington, DC 20505

Dear Mr. Colby:

You should have already received the United States Citizens' Congress' complimentary invitation to its Salute To Leadership luncheon on February 22.

The Board of Directors of the USCC hopes that you will be able to honor the occasion by your presence, and join Secretary Earl Butz, Senator Strom Thurmond and Martha Rountree as a recipient of the USCC Bicentennial Leadership Award.

We feel that you have shown those qualities of patriotism and leadership which the United States Citizens Congress is trying to encourage, as our country enters on its third century. We hope that you will allow us to so honor you on the birthday of the Father of our Country.

Yours very sincerely,

Mon Stranss Elliott B. Strauss Chairman, Board of Directors

"It's easy to campaign on simple solutions," says Bush?
"They get applause, and it's easy to give an audience every thing it wants."

But, says Bush, "I don't see the world in blacks and whites." Bush has a sharp awareness of his own good fortune in life. This awareness was driven home by the one great tragedy that darkened his family's life. Bush's second child, a daughter, died at the age of four after a tortuous six-month struggle with leukemia.

"This was a great leveller for me, to watch that little girl die," he said. "And as a result it frightens me to know that other than that, life has been so damned good to us."

Although he finds compassion for the sick, and helpless and poverty-stricken in this nation and throughout the world (he has visited the nations in which his company does business), he honestly believes that helping the world cannot be this nation's financial burden.

"Can't Remake World"

He is willing to admit that poverty and the waste of human resources elsewhere is a moral burden for every man, but he is firm in his belief that "we can't remake the world in our image."

"We can't plan away eco-
